

Do you have a child with autism spectrum disorder?

Are you interested in sharing your experiences and ideas about access to care and school intervention services?

We would like to hear from you!

The University of Rochester is conducting a research study to understand how families currently obtain diagnostic evaluations and services for ASD. We will be conducting focus groups with service providers and parents of children with ASD. The focus groups may help improve access to these evaluations and services.

What will happen?

- One two-hour meeting with other service providers or parents who share similar experiences
- Private space to share your opinions freely
- No right or wrong answers
- Compensation for your time
